

3.6 Annotated Bibliographies

- Annotated bibliographies briefly summarize an article or report and how it relates to the proposed new project.

Annotated Bibliography

Fosse, Dian. Years with the Mountain Gorilla, 2004. Dian Fosse shares observations about her research on the mountain gorilla in the Virunga Mountain Range. Her work covers social behavior and environmental challenges.

Schaller, George B. The Mountain Gorilla: Ecology and Behavior. Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1963. Print. One of the earliest comprehensive studies on the mountain gorilla; this book provided a foundation for later studies. Author George Schaller is acknowledged as a pioneer in the field, having traveled to study gorillas in 1959 at the age of 26.

3.7 What Makes Research Original?

- For a research project to be considered original, it needs to have only one substantive difference from previous work (a new exposure, a new disease/outcome, a new population, or a new perspective).
